Ventilated pants offer comfort while maintaining protection

As temperatures soar, Pro-Vents Apparel Ltd. says sweaty people can find some relief by wearing ventilated pants.

The Toronto company says its "one-of-a-kind trousers combine the protection of long pants with the comfort of shorts."

The patent-pending trousers, which "look like regular pants," were developed by James Silver, a former Hamilton steelworker.

"They are innovative in that from the knee down they incorporate an... extremely durable, polyester athletic mesh that can be covered when necessary using detachable leg covers, but is never removed itself," the company said.
